

October 31, 2011 - The Middle East Royal Families' Hypocrisy about Sorcery and their Muslim Religion

FYI - The article below highlights a beheading of a Sudanese man in Saudi Arabia for "sorcery". Take note that in the article the person who confirmed the allowance of the beheading was Saudi King Abdullah. I find this story quite interesting for its hypocrisy. I would like to tell you about my meeting with King Abdullah's private Sorcerer.

In the summer of 1998 I was staying at an apartment in Zurich, Switzerland. A friend and business partner who worked for the 13 families secretive Financial System called me. He asked me to jump on the train and come to a meeting in Geneva at his suite at the Intercontinental Hotel.

This man was staying in the suite with a secret service agent of the Saudi Government from their Paris Embassy. This agent was also reported to be a cleric. I knew him and I was told that he had performed the Muslim wedding of Prince Diana to Dodi Fayed on the yacht in Italy the week before she was intentionally killed by MI6 in Paris. (I do not forget that Diana story because on that fateful morning of the accident in August of 1997, I had arrived in Geneva for my first meeting with this "World Banking System" person who became a friend and unfortunately for me, a type of business partner. He told me that morning that Diana had been eliminated, that she was pregnant with Dodi's child, that she had been married the week before, that she was going to go back the next day to London to begin arrangements for a Gentile wedding later that year, that there were two white Renault secret service cars intentionally involved in the accident in the tunnel, that the body guard was in on it, that the car was rigged, that Prince Phillip - the Queen's husband - had been in Paris at the Embassy to oversee the secret MI6 operation, and that she died in the hospital. Consider that this information was told to me less than 14 hours after the death, and that this news was not known anywhere at that time. But, much of this has been made known over the years, inclusive of much of it confirmed through Dodi's father, Al Fayed.)

Anyway, back to the main point of this Info Letter: the story of the Sorcerer of not only King Abdullah, but the Sorcerer of most of the royal leaders in the Middle East. Of course, they called him "A Seer".

I arrived at the hotel and my friend came down and met me in the lobby. My friend was an American and he worked on the secret side of the world financial trading system with the Crowne Trust people and the Bank of International Settlements. He held an American passport, had served in the Navy Seals (Most of these kind of people on that dark side served with the Seals or the Air Force Special Ops Group that is hardly known about.). He was Persian and thus they had him deal with many of the Royal family members and Government secret sides in the Middle East and in Europe.

He explained that in the suite was a man who had just arrived in Geneva from Jeddah, and he had arrived there on Crown Prince Abdullah's 747 (In 1998, Abdullah was still the Crown Prince, even though he was basically running the country. You may recall that King Fahd had health issues.) He told me that this man was the "Seer" for the King and that he was only her for a short time and that he was leaving later that day on the private plane of Kuwait Sheikh al Sabah, for he was going to see him as well.

He told me that this man wanted to see me. I had been doing some transactions with the Royal family of Saudi Arabia. It was not fully explained to me why this man wanted to meet with me. It was implied that the Royal Family would not do business with anyone, including me, without this person's approval, or at least without his advice.

I had traveled from Zurich, so I agreed and went into the meeting. I knew in my spirit that this was not right. I should not be putting myself in the presence of a seer. But, as I was still in the world, I agreed to the meeting.

When I came into the room there were several people from Saudi Arabia in the room, and they were all grouped and speaking Arab. After some short greetings and introductions, I was told to sit on one of the inner corners of the L-shaped couch arrangement. My friend sat on my left, and next to him sat the Saudi secret service agent/cleric from the Saudi Paris Embassy.

The Seer came and sat down next to me on the other inner corner of the L-shaped couch arrangement. There were two other Saudi men who sat down on the other side of him on his couch. In front of both of us was a large square table - like a coffee table.

The Seer was a man of Lebanese background and well-dressed in a dark suit. I noticed that he kept wiping his forehead with a white handkerchief, or perhaps a silk cloth. I later learned that he ate plates of fried garlic. It was a thing that I had learned from businessmen in China that they do this to increase "mental awareness".

The Seer was introduced. He spoke to me in Arabic and my friend sitting to my left interpreted. The Seer had some square pieces of a purple paper on the table in front of me. These papers were thin and like a type of onion skin. There was a pencil on the table.

He asked me to take three of the papers and to answer questions on two of them. Then on the third I was to ask him a question. I was told that when I would finish that I was then to fold the papers so that he could not see what was in them. They told me that he would step over to the hall in the Suite so that I could write out those things as I was told. One of the questions was to write a phone number, another was to draw a picture, and on the last was I was told to write a question that I desired to know.

As they all started to rise up to leave me to perform what was told, the Seer was the last to be able to get out of the position he was in. The Saudi Secret Service Agent/Cleric sort of lingered back so that he could ask a question of the Seer, and to do so in front of me. To my surprise the Saudi Cleric asked the question of the Seer in perfect English. And again to my shock, the Seer answered in perfect English. Please understand that I had heard nothing but Arabic from all these people in the room, except for my friend's translations.

The question the Saudi Secret Service Agent/Cleric asked of the Seer in English was "How do you get your information?" I was astonished when the Seer openly and blatantly responded with, "I send out demons and they bring the information back to me."

When I heard that my heart about stopped and my tongue went bone dry. I immediately silently asked the Lord to protect me and to not let these demons know what is going on in my mind. But, I stayed, and I also did what I was told. My greed for being part of the System, and for being accepted in the Middle East, was my failure. I wanted to be successful and to finance the projects that I was trying to do, as well as to pay off all the debt I had accumulated.

I took the pencil and I drew a five pointed normal star on one paper and folded it up. I then wrote down a phone number that was a combination of two phone numbers of places I called on a not so regular basis, but they were numbers that I could remember at the time, and they were not mine. I folded that paper and again laid it on the table. I then wrote out a question and folded that paper and also laid it on the table.

Shortly the people rejoined me after they finished their refreshments and Arabic discussions. The Seer knew the order of the papers. He took the first paper and held it to his forehead. He then took a new purple paper and with the pencil, accurately drew the star. Then opening my paper he handed both to me, and he said to hold them up to the light together. I did so. It was astonishing. The man had exactly drawn the star, even with the flow of the pencil and difference in the pattern gradients. It was not humanly possible to do that. He did the same with the next two papers. And the results were identical.

He then had some discussions with the Saudi's and my friend. He then looked at me and told some things about me that would occur. (None of these things have occurred to this date.) We got up to go to lunch, and he told me to not worry, that it would be okay. He recognized that I did not know what they were saying amongst themselves.

Before we went downstairs to the hotel restaurant, the Saudi Secret Service Agent/Cleric pulled my friend and myself into one of the bedrooms and whispered that he did not trust this guy and that he did not like Seers.

Later, after I left the meeting, from the Geneva Train Station, I called a Saudi Sheikh friend in Dubai on my portable phone. I asked him about this man and he said that he knew him, that he was very famous in the Middle East. He said that I should not trust him, but he confirmed that he is the Seer of the Royal families in the Middle East and has been on TV throughout the Middle East. He said that this man had caused hearts to be pulled right out of people. He said that this guy would cause men's wallets to be taken out of their pockets and he would have it in his hand, and yet he had never come close to them. He said that this man was a very powerful person over the dark-side forces. So, that was not a comforting thought. He told me that the Saud royal family does seek these people for advice before they make decisions.

Well, this story does not end there, for my awareness to the Sorcery of these Middle East leaders was just beginning. I also called my wife (Now ex-wife) in San Antonio, Texas, on my cell phone from the train station in Geneva. I told her what had occurred. She was mad at me for going to such a meeting, but it was one of those things where the Lord uses something that was meant for evil, and turns it to good, for He certainly allowed me to see a view of some of the evil side of the demonic things of the world.

Later that day, just before evening when I got back to my furnished apartment in Zurich, I was sitting watching the news on the TV and drinking a coffee. I was also looking at those three purple papers that I had brought along as souvenirs. I had them laid out on the coffee table in front of the couch where I was sitting.

My apartment was a small one bedroom flat in a very secure building in Appenzell, Switzerland. The entrance door was right at the top of the stairs on the fourth floor. That door opened to a small area with the dining table just to the right upon entering. To the left was a short hall with a door on the right going to the bedroom and the door on the left into the bathroom. On the other side, just past the dining table was a small kitchen. As you enter the kitchen the stove was on the left with some storage cabinets mixed around the stove. To the right were first the sink and then the refrigerator.

As I was sitting there looking at those papers and drinking coffee, suddenly the cupboard doors in the kitchen started slamming open and shut very loudly. Pans inside the cupboards even fell. I jumped up and I went out there. There was no one anywhere but one of the cupboard doors was partially opened. I shut the door and looked around the flat. Seeing no one, I went back to the couch. I had hardly sat down and the banging of the kitchen cupboards started up again. Again I got up and again the door to a cupboard was opened.

I knew then that the demons had followed me home. I called my wife in San Antonio and explained what had happened. We decided that what I needed to do was to burn those purple papers and flush them down the toilet. I put them in an ash tray and I burnt them, and then I flushed them down the toilet.

That seemed to do the trick, at least temporarily. But, the next day as I was working and making some phone calls, I was again sitting on the couch. The noise came again from the kitchen. I was thinking about what had happened. This was just as loud as the previous day. I called my wife again and for some reason we decided that I should check my clothes that I had worn to the meeting.

I did this and was astonished to find that inside my clothes, inside the linings of the clothes, and in the cuffs of the clothes, there were more of these purple papers. I could not believe it. I do not know how the man planted those papers on me. I was never alone, and of course I was wearing these clothes. I also found them hidden in my briefcase. It was impossible, but it had happened.

Of course I burned those papers, and again everything seemed normal again. But, during the night I was awakened by the bedroom door opening. I rolled over and I could see a shadow at the foot of the bed. I decided that there was nothing to do but leave it to the Lord. So, I rolled over and told the Lord that it was up to Him, and I went back to sleep. The thing stomped about, but I ignored it and went to sleep. I had remembered a story from a minister, who had such an experience; I believe it was Derek Prince. He had ignored them, turned it over to God, and he had rolled over and went to sleep. He worked, for I slept good.

In the morning I called my wife and we talked about it. It was decided that I should take some oil and anoint all the doors and windows and pray to have these demons cast out from the apartment. I did and they never came back inside again.

But, it was not over. I believe it was the very next evening, it was a Friday evening, at around 10 or 11 PM, I was sitting at the dining table and typing on a business proposal. I was seated at the end of the table. That positioned me directly beside, and inside of, the door that is the entrance to the apartment. As I was deep in thought and typing diligently, I was suddenly startled by a terrible noise immediately beside me.

The apartment door was a metal door. What I heard was the sound of someone taking their nails and scraping them down the door. This came from the other side of the door that I was sitting next to. It was a terrible scratching noise. I jumped up from my chair. I immediately went to the door and peaked through the pin hole designed to look through to see who is outside the door. It was dark out there.

I quickly turned on the light to the stairway and lobby. I could not see anyone. I opened the door and there was no one and seemingly nothing out in the stairwell. I was sure that there was no way that anyone could have gotten away, for I had reacted quick and any little movement in the hall ways would have caused the lights to turn on.

I went back inside and after making some coffee, I sat back down and began to continue with my typing. Suddenly the sound came back again and this time it was more fierce with an agitating nail screeching sound.

This time I went out immediately and of course there was nothing to be seen. I lived on the third floor of four. I checked both ways and there was no one. It was impossible for a person to hide there. And, again, the motion sensors had not tripped the security lights.

Well, I had learned my lesson. I went and got the oil and I anointed the doors of all the four floors and the small lobby. I asked the Lord to seal these rooms from these demons. I realized that these were the most powerful demons that I had ever experienced.

The next day, at my wife's suggestion I took the oil and I anointed the entire border of the apartment building, inclusive of the four corners and walkways. I did not experience these demons again. It was certainly a spiritual learning experience.

The point to this story is that it is very intriguing to me that the King of Saudi Arabia has the gull of ordering the beheading people for sorcery, when they are actual active participants in financing sorcery for their purposes. These are the men who are in charge of keeping the Holiest places of Islam, and yet, as I learned from firsthand account, they are seeking the advice of Seers who send out demons to collect their information.

But, in no way should people believe that this sorcery is limited to the leadership people of the Middle East. It is likened to the many stories of Americans worshipping Satan. In several writings I have made known the information in regard to the example of leaders in America who are worshipping Satan. Today it is pretty much common for the leaders to flash the Satanic sign formed with their fingers.

Also the books of people like Cathy O'Brien and Bryce Taylor have written books that detailed many of the absolutely evil satanic things that leaders in this nation have done, including most of the Presidents of this nation. They describe specific events. Cathy tells the story of the late Sen. Byrd of West Virginia who would take homeless people off the street, and he would kill them in a ritual blood sacrifice. And it is reported that members of the British family, and others, like Rothschild and people like Al Gore, have worshipped Satan with human blood sacrifices. I have also included a news article about Prince Charles from this past week's Daily Mail. It seems to hint at the Royal family offering blood sacrifices, and that it runs in the family history back to Count Dracula, and this is the blood line of this British Royal family.

It is interesting to take note how the Royal family has been recently accrediting more to their German/European bloodline relationships. There was announced in the press in the early summer of a push in Russia to have Prince Harry be appointed as the heir to the Russian Czar's royal throne because of this bloodline. But, there is clearly a lot of evil in this particular British royal blood line. I have explained how they are committed to taking God's place and by their own wisdom have decided to eliminate over 98% of all the people on the planet. These are clearly very satanic based families. I have told this story of the demons and the sorcerer in the Middle East. But, remember that the System's agent was there to meet with the Sorcerer. I have also shown the picture from David Icke's website of the satanic symbol of the inverted pentacle on the back of the robe of one of the priests that performed at Prince William's wedding (See the picture to the right). I saw the pattern on the robe on the TV broadcast of the wedding, but I could not make out the design on TV. The picture above was sent out by David Icke in one of his weekly emails soon after that time.

The point is that this is the satanic/sorcery mindset of these people. Yet, they place themselves above the law even though they violate their own rulings. They have people beheaded for sorcery when they allow men that send out demons to be consultants to themselves. It seems clear that the 13 families are masking that they are worshipping satan. However, it also seems clear that they are more openly declaring it because they have no fear of the Christians and Jews. They know what satan knows, and that is the Christians and Jews are not obedient to their God, and therefore they do not have the authority over His Words that would give them the release of His Power that would overcome them through the doing of the Ways of His Words. I have explained the meaning of this in countless audios and writings.

I have also made it clear that the bible says that the Lord is not going to move to intervene until the people turn and call upon Him by the Ways of His Words so that they can enable Him to come (Matthew 23:39). If they do not call upon Him in the Ways of enabling His Promises that are given to us within His Words - the doing of the Ways of His Truth - then the Lord says that the church will perish, for these people will call all flesh on the earth (Mt. 24:22, Mk. 13:20) unless His people intercede to enable Him to come forth, intervene, and overcome their evil plans.

May you arise to His Good Morning in this Dark Time of Night,

Floyd E. Taylor

The moment man was publicly beheaded in a Saudi Arabian car park for being a 'sorcerer'

- 44 people have been executed in Saudi Arabia this year
- Alarming rise in killings since end of Ramadan
- Seven killed since Sept 5, when executions restarted
- 140 prisoners facing the death penalty

Shocking footage has surfaced of a Sudanese man being publicly beheaded in Saudi Arabia for being a 'sorcerer'.

Crouched on his knees and blindfolded, Abdul Hamid Bin Hussain Bin Moustafa al-Fakki was executed in a car park Medina, in the west of the country, as dozens looked on last month.

The grainy footage - which MailOnline believes is too graphic to publish - shows the executioner lining his sword up on the back of Abdul Hamid's neck, before one swift stroke decapitates him.

The killer draws his sword back as dozens of people watch in the car park

The Sudanese man, who was killed on September 20, is believed to have been the 44th person executed in Saudi Arabia this year - and the 11th foreign national.

The total for 2011 is 17 more than for the whole of 2010. Lebanese TV host Ali Hussain Sibat, who was sentenced to death over making predictions of the future on his show, had been scheduled to be beheaded on Friday.

His attorney May El Khansa said the execution did not take place on that day - but that did not mean Sibat has been given a reprieve.

The alarming rise in the number of executions in the country has led to criticism from a number of human rights charities.

Saudis are understood to prefer beheading by a sharp sword, as they think it more humane and quicker than electrocution and lethal injection.

Amnesty International pleaded with King Abdullah but the Saudi monarch still allowed the killing of Abdul Hamid Bin Hussain Bin Moustafa al-Fakki for sorcery

And while the crime of 'sorcery' is undefined in Saudi Arabian law, it has been used to punish people for the legitimate exercise of their human rights.

Abdul Hamid is understood to have been arrested in 2005 after he was entrapped by a man working for the Mutawa'een (religious police).

He was asked to concoct a spell that would cause the officer's father to leave his second wife.

According to the officer's account Abdul Hamid agreed to carry out the curse in exchange for 6,000 Saudi Arabian riyals (approximately £1,000).

He was beaten after his arrest and thought to have been forced to admit to acts of sorcery.

In a secret trial, where he was not allowed legal representation, he was sentenced to death by the General Court in Medina in March 2007.

Few details are available about his trial but he is reported to have been tried behind closed doors and without legal representation.

At the time of his arrest, English language Saudi daily The Saudi Gazette ran an article entitled Magic Maids which said that 'we must face up to the threats from some maids and servants and their satanic games of witchcraft and sorcery, their robbery, murder, entrapment of husbands, corruption of children and other countless stories of crime that have been highlighted by both experts and victims of these crimes'.

Sentenced to death: Lebanese TV host Ali Hussain Sibat still faces execution for 'predicting the future'

Malcolm Smart, Amnesty International's Director for the Middle East and North Africa, heavily criticised the killing.

He said: 'Abdul Hamid's execution is appalling as is Saudi Arabia's continuing use of this most cruel and extreme penalty.

'That he should have been executed without having committed anything that would appear to constitute a crime is yet another deeply upsetting example of why the Saudi Arabian government should immediately cease executions and take steps to abolish the death penalty.'

The charity had campaigned on Abdul Hamid's behalf following his arrest and had urged Saudi Arabia's King Abdullah to prevent his execution.

But it has been to no avail, and since the end of the holy month of Ramadan a few weeks ago, the Saudi Arabian authorities have resumed executions at an alarming pace.

According to Amnesty International seven people have been executed since the killings resumed on September 5.

Some 140 prisoners are believed to be facing the death penalty in Saudi Arabia.

And last December, Saudi Arabia was one of a minority of states that voted against a UN general assembly resolution calling for the worldwide moratorium on executions.

Blue bloods: Prince Charles joins campaign to save Transylvania's forests - because of his family connections to 'Count Dracula'

By Damien Gayle

Last updated at 5:47 PM on 27th October 2011

Prince Charles is campaigning to save the forests of Transylvania, inspired by his ancestral links to Vlad the Impaler, the 15th century nobleman better known by his patronym, Dracula.

Rapid economic growth in Romania - which is now part of the EU - means that the forests of the Carpathian Mountains are under threat from development and logging.

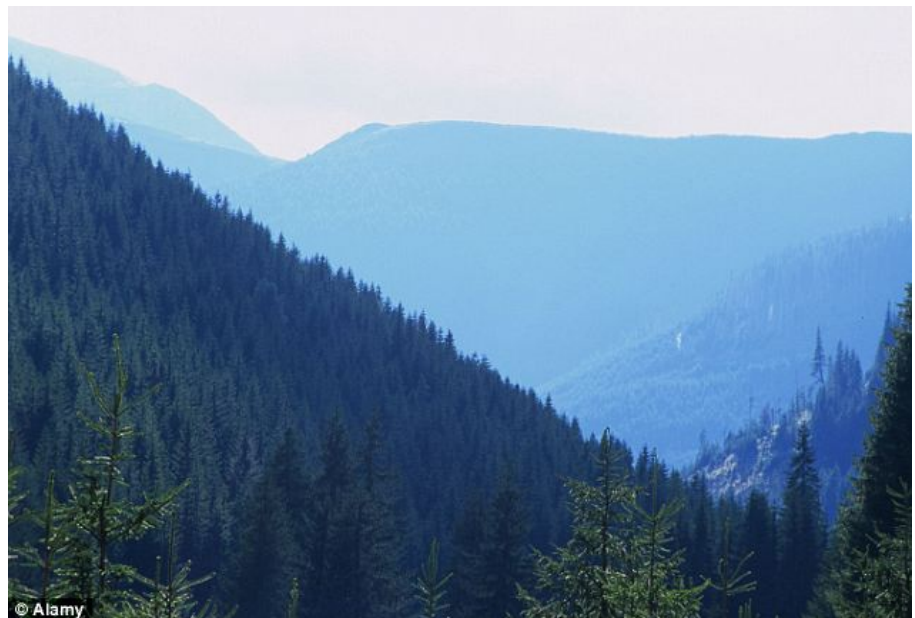

The Prince is calling for the forests, some of the last untouched wilderness areas in Europe, to be protected before they are lost, like the woodland that once covered Britain.

He claims a family connection to the area through Vlad III, Prince of Wallachia, who earned the sobriquet Vlad the Impaler thanks to his favoured method of torture and execution.

The 15th century nobleman, notorious for his bloodthirsty campaigns against the Ottomans and fierce repression of his people, is a distant ancestor of Charles's great-grandmother, Queen Mary.

The total number of his victims is estimated in the tens of thousands, many killed by being impaled on huge metal stakes.

His reputation for cruelty is said to have helped inspire Bram Stoker's diabolical villain, Count Dracula.

Virgin: The forests of the Carpathian Mountains, some of the last untouched wilderness areas in Europe, are under threat from development and logging

Biodiversity: A European grey wolf stalks the forest of Transylvania. The area is also home to brown bears, lynx, and 13,000 other species

In a new documentary about the Carpathian mountains, Charles makes fun of his ancestral links to 'Count Dracula'.

'The genealogy shows I am descended from Vlad the Impaler, so I do have a bit of a stake in the country,' he quipped.

The Prince has recently bought a five-bedroom house in the village of Zalanpatak, which is said to have been founded by one of his Transylvanian ancestors.

Charles is expected to use the 150-year-old home as an isolated holiday retreat, and it will be used as a guesthouse when he is not in residence.

The Prince first visited Transylvania in 1998 and has bought three properties there, including the Zalanpatak house and a £43-a-night guesthouse in the village of Viscri.

Old haunt: The farmhouse in Viscri, Transylvania, that Charles bought in 2006 and turned into a guesthouse

Fit for a future king: Inside the 18th century farmhouse in Viscri, now restored as a guest house after it was purchased by the Prince of Wales

Traditional farming and building techniques used in the area are said to have inspired his plans for Poundbury, the Dorset village created by his Duchy of Cornwall.

HOW THE ROYAL FAMILY IS LINKED TO COUNT DRACULA

Count Dracula is related to Britain's royal family both genealogically and through a medical condition that gives sufferers a thirst for blood.

It is believed that Queen Mary, consort of George V, was related to the 15th Century slayer Vlad the Impaler, who was also known as Dracula Vlad is said to have dispatched more than 100,000 Turkish warriors in battle. The vampire legend was fed by his predilection for eating bread dipped in his victim's blood.

And it is known that porphyria, an iron deficiency, which is thought to lie behind the vampire myth and may have spurred Vlad's taste for blood, has run in the Royal Family.

He has since sold a manor near the medieval town of Sighisoara, while the Viscri and Zalanpatak guesthouses are managed by Count Tibor Kalnoky.

'It seems to me in Transylvania there is a combination of the natural ecosystem with a human cultural system,' the prince told the documentary, according to the Daily Telegraph.

'This extraordinarily unique integrated relationship is so hugely important. People are yearning for that sense of belonging and identity and meaning.'

If development goes ahead, Romania could end up barren like swathes of the Highlands of Scotland or Canada that were once dense with virgin forest, Prince Charles warned.

Two-hundred-and-fifty-thousand hectares of virgin forests are in urgent need of protection, according to Magor Csibi, country manager of the World Wildlife Fund's Danube-Carpathian programme in Romania.

The area, home to brown bears, lynx, wolves, and 13,000 other species, represents up to 65 per cent of Europe's remaining virgin forests.
